Connecting Decision Makers to Enterprise Data

There are more applications, tools and datasets available to commercial and government organizations than ever before, with more coming online every day. Together with existing legacy systems, this should mean better decision making. But that promise isn't being fully realized because enterprises aren't able to connect all of their data, tools and networks to the leaders and teams who need them most.

That's the problem that Conduce solves.

Conduce provides a single interface to all of an organization's data and all of its enterprise tools, without requiring any integration.

All applications. All formats. All sources. Unified at last.

Our technology makes any and all enterprise information available on a single pane of glass. Our systems give decision makers instant, intuitive access to the data and tools they need to make faster and better decisions. Our solutions unlock the power of data, and unleash the ability of leaders to drive their organizations forward.

How it Works

Unify Everything Without Integrating Anything

Conduce technology unites legacy systems, new applications and even external feeds at the presentation layer, not the data layer. It's the most efficient, least disruptive and least costly way for enterprises to give users access to all available information and tools.

See the Story Your Data is Trying to Tell You

Conduce technology transforms data into stunning visualizations that users can orchestrate at will: zooming, filtering, rewinding and arranging information freely, in order to uncover insights that a spreadsheet, chart or dashboard simply can't reveal.

Extract New Value from Existing Investments

Conduce technology embraces data from any application. That means no major deployments or abrupt changeovers. Decision makers can keep their preferred tools, and organizations can continue to realize value from previous technology investments.

Find New Ways to Solve Problems Together

Conduce allows cross-functional teams to access and orchestrate data fluidly across locations and out in the field, so that they can work as an integrated unit to make joint decisions and execute tasks that help the organization achieve its objectives.
